Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

2. Claims 1-9, 12-15,18-20,23-29,32-35 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as anticipated by Flugstad et al (US 2002/0047009) cited by applicant. Flugstad discloses variable frequency automated capacitive radio frequency (RF) dielectric heating system having a medium comprising hydrocarbonaceous material selected from the group consisting of oil shale, tar sand, oil sand, coal, bitumen, and/or kerogen (par. 0003, line 12), the apparatus comprising maintain a source of an alternating current radio frequency signal at a radio frequency not greater than 300 MHz, said source being connected to a pair of electrodes on opposite sides of a product treatment zone to cause an radio frequency signal to generate an alternating current electric field in said medium residing within said product treatment zone; a frequency controller to adjust said frequency of said radio frequency signal between different said radio frequencies; a mathematical model that predicts impedance of said medium as a function of temperature; an impedance sensor to sense impedance data of said medium; and a computer programmed to receive said impedance data from said impedance sensor, to process said impedance data using said mathematical model for said medium, and to apply a control signal to said frequency controller to adjust said frequency of said radio frequency signal to match said sensed impedance to a predetermined impedance (pages 23-24, claims 47-73).

NOTE: Since the claims are apparatus claims, as long as the applied reference has the same claimed structures and capable to heat the material, then the applied reference anticipated the claimed limitations.

or in the alternative, under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as obvious over Flugstad et al (US 2002/0047009) in view of Rowland et al (US 4,135,579)

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claims 1-37 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Flugstad et al (US 2002/0047009) cited by applicant, in view of Rowland et al (US 4,135,579) new cited. Flugstad discloses substantially all features of the claimed invention including heating material being soil, but does not disclose a heating medium comprising hydrocarbonaceous material selected from the group consisting of oil shale, tar sand, oil sand, coal, bitumen, and/or kerogen. Rowland discloses a heating medium comprising hydrocarbonaceous material selected from the group consisting of oil shale, tar sand, oil sand, coal, bitumen, and/or kerogen (col. 1, lines 10-33). It would have been obvious to one ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to utilize in Flugstad a heating medium comprising hydrocarbonaceous material selected from the group consisting of oil shale, tar sand, oil sand, coal, bitumen, and/or kerogen as taught by Rowland in order to low viscosity of the oil for easy flow.
